Unique beauty of sun, sea and beach at the foot of the giant mountains

Budva is considered to be one of the oldest places on the Adriatic Coast. According to legend Budva was founded by Kadmo, the son of the Phoenician King Agenos, after he had been banished from Thebes. He arrived there on a bullock cart and established the town of Budva. The old town of Budva lies on a small peninsula that is connected to the land by a causeway. It is surrounded with high walls built in the 15th century.

Those walls represent a medieval-style fortification system, with town gates, protection walls and towers. From the urban point of view the town is laid out with narrow streets and small squares and valuable monuments from different Mediterranean cultures that all mark the development of the town Budva.

Sightseeing of this beautiful Old town, and after dinner in beautiful restaurant.
